1. Prologue/ Introduction of the programme:

The course prepares students of Strategic studies to understand and think meticulously on the various aspects of Indian military history and hence it is important that discussions on the various topics are made regularly. Indian military history is replete with nations of bravery. Interesting in its history is the evolution part which depicts the various art of how warfare was fought and the principles of warfare. Although we live in a missile age with nations of deterrence and complete annihilation and armed with sophisticated weapons, yet it is important to understand how these got developed over a period of time and along with such military historical development how such nations got imbibed into the contemporary military strategic thinking. This course prepares students for either Professional careers or for advancement to high level education. Therefore it is important that students should have a sound critical understanding of key theoretical concepts as well as demonstrate empirical knowledge of case studies. Defence Mechanism of India in this course student understand the forces of the Indian army are organized into three different types of groups namely the Infantry, the Cavalry and the Artillery. Earlier known as Military Science, Military Studies or Defence Studies is a recognized degree in Defence and Strategic Studies the degree Programme in Defence and Strategic Studies is only a few places while it exists as one of the elective subject in most of places the approach to the Study in the discipline is interdisciplinary as the subject broadly covers military history, war national security studies, Peace and Conflict Studies, International terrorism, defence economics and other aspect related to military or security of the nation and as such aspects like geopolitics, and military geography, economics of defence etc.
