2. Prologue/ Introduction of the programme:

The Bachelor Programme in Political Science is an undergraduate degree program that focuses on the study of politics, government systems, political behavior, and public policy. It provides students with a comprehensive understanding of political processes, institutions, and theories that shape societies and international relations.

During the course of the program, students delve into various aspects of political science, including political theory, comparative politics, international relations, public administration, and political economy. They explore topics such as the origins and development of political systems, the role of political parties and interest groups, the dynamics of power and governance, and the formulation and implementation of public policies.

The curriculum typically combines theoretical and practical approaches to learning. Students engage in critical analysis, research, and evaluation of political systems and phenomena. They develop skills in areas such as research methodology, data analysis, public speaking, and policy analysis. Additionally, they gain a deep understanding of the historical, cultural, and socioeconomic factors that influence politics and policymaking.

Throughout the program, students have the opportunity to specialize in specific areas of political science, such as international relations, political theory, public policy, or comparative politics. They can choose elective courses that align with their interests and career aspirations, allowing them to deepen their knowledge in a particular subfield.

The Bachelor Programme in Political Science equips students with a wide range of transferable skills that are highly valued in various professions and sectors. Graduates often pursue careers in government agencies, non-profit organizations, international organizations, advocacy groups, research institutions, journalism, or political consulting. The program also serves as a solid foundation for those who wish to pursue advanced degrees in political science or related fields, such as law, public policy, or international relations.

Overall, the Bachelor Programme in Political Science provides students with a comprehensive understanding of political processes, critical thinking skills, and a solid foundation for various career paths related to politics, governance, and policy-making.

3. Programme Outcomes (POs):

The Bachelor degree program in Political Science aims to equip students with a range of knowledge, skills, and competencies that prepare them for various careers and further academic pursuits. Some of the key program outcomes for a Bachelor degree in Political Science include:

1. Knowledge of Political Systems: Students will acquire a deep understanding of political systems, institutions, and processes at the local, national, and international levels. They will be familiar with different forms of government, political ideologies, and the functioning of democratic and non-democratic systems.

2. Understanding of Political Theory: Students will be exposed to major political theories and thinkers, enabling them to critically analyze and evaluate different perspectives on power, justice, equality, and rights. They will develop the ability to apply theoretical frameworks to real-world political issues.
3. Analytical and Research Skills: Students will gain proficiency in research methods, data analysis, and critical thinking. They will learn to collect, interpret, and evaluate political data and evidence, enabling them to conduct independent research and analyze complex political phenomena.
4. Policy Analysis and Evaluation: Students will develop the skills to analyze public policies, assess their effectiveness, and propose alternative solutions. They will understand the factors that shape policy-making processes and gain the ability to evaluate the impact of policies on societies, institutions, and individuals.
5. Global Perspective and International Relations: Students will acquire knowledge of international relations, including the dynamics of power, diplomacy, global governance, and conflicts. They will understand the complexities of the international system and the role of states, non-state actors, and international organizations.
6. Communication and Presentation Skills: Students will develop strong written and oral communication skills, enabling them to articulate complex political concepts and ideas effectively. They will be able to present their research findings, engage in debates, and communicate persuasively in various professional settings.
7. Ethical and Professional Responsibility: Students will understand the ethical dimensions of political science and the responsibilities of political actors. They will be equipped with a sense of social and civic responsibility, including a commitment to democratic values, human rights, and social justice.
8. Adaptability and Leadership: Students will cultivate skills in adaptability, problem-solving, and teamwork, preparing them for careers in diverse professional environments. They will develop leadership qualities and the ability to work collaboratively to address complex political challenges.

These program outcomes provide students with a solid foundation for a wide range of career paths, including public administration, policy analysis, diplomacy, advocacy, research, journalism, law, and academia. They also lay the groundwork for further academic pursuits, such as pursuing a Master's or a Ph.D. in Political Science or related disciplines.
